Wendelbo is continuing its successful collaboration with Italian designer Luca Nichetto, with the launch of a soft, comfortable lounge chair in a design that unites organic and stringent styling. Luca Nichetto's inspiration for the Aloe Lounge Chair came from nature, with the soft yet upright shape of the Aloe Vera plant as the starting point.

Like the leaves of the Aloe Vera plant, the Aloe Lounge Chair combines a rounded, soft shape with elegant tension and an upright attitude. Italian designer Luca Nichetto, already a contributor to Wendelbo's collection, also took his inspiration for the new high-backed lounge chair by studying the structure of this iconic health plant.

“The lounge chair consists of a black lacquered steel tubular frame that supports the padded shell in a way that adds visual tissue and a light, almost weightless look to the furniture,” Luca Nichetto explains, and he has let the chair's shell sink into the slanted embrace of the frame. This approach to the design gives the chair a dynamic look and a sense that the chair is balanced on a single point.

The curved, tightly padded outer shape of the shell contrasts with a soft interior. The inviting upholstery sports horizontal stitching centrally on the back piece – creating the effect of a fold in the textile, and an expectation of comfort. Another important detail is the edge stitching, which establishes coherence between the chair back and armrests while emphasising the embracing shape.

“Once again, Luca Nichetto has succeeded in creating an innovative design that fits perfectly into Wendelbo’s collection. The Aloe Lounge Chair looks light and very comfortable,” says Lars Wendelbo, Design and Production Manager at Wendelbo.

Aloe is available in a wide selection of textiles, and leather.
